

The Property Investor Show
23 March 2007

HOW DO YOU MAKE PROPERTY 40% MORE VALUABLE?
- Intrepid Investments CEO suggests SIPPs could be the answer -

Scott Huggins, CEO of Intrepid Investments (www.intrepidinvestments.com), a leading overseas property company, firmly believes that the right investment route will see savvy property investors benefiting from placing residential property into SIPPs.

Speaking at this weekend's Property Investor Show, Huggins will comment on SIPPs, and the challenges faced to date in relation to residential property. He will address audiences throughout the weekend, looking at appropriate investment vehicles, and offering advice on today's booming overseas property markets.

Huggins, better known for his time as a BBC TV presenter for the show 'Get A New Life', set up Intrepid Investments in 2004, in a bid to provide private investor clients similar opportunities to those being offered to property experts.

Today, the company is geared towards helping clients to make high performing bricks and mortar investments in key emerging markets. It operates two arms – an investment club for high-net worth individuals, and Intrepid Homes, aimed at lifestyle clients.

Commenting on SIPPs, Huggins said: "The market surrounding SIPPs and residential property is one that many find hard to understand, and – to date – would-be investors have looked towards other routes for investing in this sector.

"With the right investment vehicle comes the possibility of placing residential property into a SIPP, be it domestic or overseas."

The speech will run twice throughout the weekend; once on the Saturday 24th March at 3.30pm, and then again on Sunday 25th at 10.45am. Further information can be found at <http://www.propertyinvestor.co.uk/birmingham/seminar.asp>

Intrepid Investments is also exhibiting at the event on stand number 402.
